Now It Can Be Told. By PHILIP GIBBS. New York: Harper & Bros., 1920. Pp. x+558. $3.00.

An absorbing and stirring book of incidents of the Great War, which the writer, a British war correspondent, could not relate before because of "the conspiracy of silence." The volume is an interesting study in the psychology of war and in the attitudes of fighting men.

A Service of Love in War Time. By RUFUS M. JONES. New York: The Macmillan Co., 1920. Pp. xvii+284. $2.50.

An illuminating brief report of the work of relief and rehabilitation carried on by the American Society of Friends in France and other countries during the final years of the war and after the Armistice.

Is America Worth Saving? By NICHOLAS MURRAY BUTLER. New York: Charles Scribner's Sons, 1920. Pp. xiv+398. $2.00.

A forceful and timely series of addresses upon the fundamental principles underlying the American government and American social and industrial life, and upon the application of those principles to the solution of present and future problems.

The Red Conspiracy. By JOSEPH J. MERETO. New York: The National Historical Society, 1920. Pp. xii+398. $2.15.

Another volume added to the long list of books upon the subject of the so-called "red peril" in its various aspects. Reveals the attitudes of the extreme radical elements of the world toward social institutions and the existing social order by extensive quotations from their literature.

A Shorter History of England and of Greater Britain. By ARTHUR LYON CROSS. New York: The Macmillan Co., 1920. Pp. xxvii+942. $4.50.

A briefer form of the History of England and Greater Britain by the same author. The earlier parts of the book have been revised and condensed and four chapters have been added, two of which deal with the activities of England and Greater Britain in the Great War. The interesting material on social and industrial conditions has been retained in the new volume with little curtailment.

"Broke": The Man Without the Dime. By EDWIN A. BROWN. Boston: The Four Seas Co., 1920. Pp. xviii+370. $2.00.

Interesting as revealing the attitudes of the penniless, shelterless, and destitute in our great cities.
